There had been several complaints made to the sheriff of cider being sold to young men and boys and the Sheriff swiftly followed what clues he could find to start in on and after some clever work discovered the "joint."

During the raid, the Sheriff found two one gallon jugs and deduced them as waiting for a sale. While the men were still on the Kimball premises, two cars drove into the yard but seeing what was going on, quickly drove out. NEW ENGLAND'S CITIZENS

MILITARY TRAINING

CAMPS ARE FILLED

Applications for enrollment in the Citizens Military Training Camps in the First Corps Area have been received in such large numbers during the past few weeks that the total number of applications on file exceeds the capacity of the camps.

Officials at the Army Base at Boston state that there is little or no probability that young men applying at this late date can be accommodated.

Saturday, July 5, has been set as the opening date for all the New England camps. On that date nearly 3,500 young men will begin their month's instruction and recreation at Fort Adams, R. I.; Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Fort McKimley, Maine and Camp Evans, Mass.

The entire first day will be devoted to properly equipping the trainees, assigning them to their respective units, and sports of various kinds.

Actual instruction begins on Monday, July 7th, and will continue until Saturday, August 2nd.

The Library Association gratefully acknowledges the gift, from one who wishes to remain anonymous, of five of the leading magazines for the years of 1929 and 1931.

Years ago, before the days of universal automobiles and open roads in winter, a slide was made in the library door through which books might be put, for the convenience of patrons living out of the village.

The year and tear upon books subjected to this usage is so great especially where, as often happens, books are wedged in, that it is decided that the custom must be discontinued and the slide will consequently be closed.

Judge Hastings, who is retiring in his service to the library, kindly offers to let any people from outside the village have the privilege of leaving their books at his office, when they may wish to do so.

FARM BUILDINGS BURNED

The buildings owned and occupied by Lyman Winslow and family on what was formerly known as the "Crib" Bean-Ferry Farm were struck by lightning and burned Tuesday afternoon during the most severe electrical storm Bethel has experienced for some years.

SALVATION ARMY

ANNUAL APPEAL

$150 of $500 Needed from Bethel given by three friends. $1,800 of $2,600 needed from Rumford subscribed. $150 of $250 needed from Andover subscribed. $150 of $250 needed from Dixfield subscribed.

$3,600 the total annual Salvation Army Budget for the Rumford end of Oxford County, includes maintenance of 2 officers $1,000, $980 indebtedness, $150 heat, light and telephone, $150 travel, $800 Charity and Christmas Relief, $100 poor children's outing and $400 rent of hall and quarters.

Captain W. E. Hoffman, Representative from Portland who spoke last Sunday in the local M. E. Church, states that if the citizens back this annual appeal, meeting the quota they shall be free from Tammer collection and thus help the officers to devote 40% more time to their useful work, which almost all seem to appreciate since the world war. Assisting the captain over the week end in presenting this worthy appeal are Envoys Arthur Kahn and Envoys George Hoyt and they are pleased with the cooperation of pastors and members of local organizations and the press.

In presenting the appeal you are asked to consider the following: Who can better than Salvation Army reach the otherwise neglected side of humanity; the unfortunate girl (unwed mother) with her little fatherless babe hundreds of whom are cared for annually in New England and the underprivileged boys and girls whose only chance of an outing is through the Army Summer Camps.

P. B. Merrill will receive funds for the drive locally at the bank, if you are out when the workers call.

Alton F. Bartlett, M. R. Hastings and Mrs. Walter Bond have headed the Bethel list with $50 each toward the $500 quota. Do your best and the Army will prove worthy of your support.

Capt. Russell Smith the commanding officer of Rumford expects to visit and hold open air meetings in Bethel semi-monthly and urges your help that he may better assist those less fortunate.

BETHEL SHUTS OUT

WEST PARIS 4 to 0

Sterling Pitching of Rodney Bartlett Too Much For Visiting Team

(By R. E. D.)

The local fans were treated to another fine exhibition of baseball Wednesday afternoon when the B. A. A. aggregation blanked West Paris. The outfield was very much alive in this game and several nice catches were turned in by the gardeners. White made a couple and Smiley one. Although Swan did not have a chance to make a catch, he made two perfect throw-ins.

The infield supported our star south-paw faultlessly. In fact, the whole team played errorless ball. (I might say, for a change; but I won't.) The signals also worked very well in this contest. Weber came through with sacrifices when they counted most, and Swan advanced a man in big league style.

The locals started out with one run in the first on a hit by Weber and a stolen base mixed with an error. This run looked very big for six innings as Rodney was moving down the opposition without a falter. We got two more in the seventh, however. Rodney started things with a safety; Goddard followed suit, and Robertson crashed out a mighty two-ply wallop to score his teammates. One more tally was added in the eighth. Alger walked, made second on a wild throw by the catcher, took third on Swan's sacrifice, and scored when the visiting shortstop dropped Smiley's pop-up.

Bartlett struck out seven men and allowed only five hits. Twice the bases were loaded but he bore down in the pinches and extricated himself from every difficulty. The team accorded him faultless support.

Weber played a whale of a game on the first cushion. His stretching ability saved his teammates from errors in a couple instances. Goddard and Bartlett were all over the infield while the whole outfield looked like a million. Robertson called them right and also prevented any basestealing. In their second home game of the season the locals gave an exhibition that will go a long way toward winning the support and backing of Bethel voters.

MUSHROOMS AND FIRE

If a few people become ill or die from eating poisonous mushrooms, public opinion is aroused and manifests itself in demands for mushroom inspection, prohibition or whatnot.

Yet if a hundred people are burned to death in a fire which could have been easily prevented, the nation hardly gives it a second thought.

It is a parallel case to the old newspaper dictum: "If a dog bites a man, that's not news; but if a man bites a dog that is news." In the one instance the public is appalled mainly because of the uncommonness of the agency of death. We have come to regard fire, to the contrary, as being usual and unavoidable.

This is a tragic situation. Every year thousands of people lose their lives to say nothing of the hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property destroyed, to cause of consequences of far more than a momentary nature.

If the death of a person from a poisonous mushroom is a tragedy, the death of thousands every year from fire should create a great public movement to remove the danger.

Along the Concrete

Chance Discoveries by

Favorites of Fortune

Every one has heard of Carrara marble. In 1929 a party of English tourists exploring the mountains of Carrara found a dirty block of marble which had evidently fallen from a cliff overhead. One of the visitors, who had some knowledge of geology, noticed that this stone had a plate tint that was unusual. The sample was taken to England, where it was found to be a new variety. A quarry was opened and proved profitable. Two women, Mrs. Wilson and Miss Spencer, were crossing the Mojave desert in southern California, looking for gold. They were not successful, and one night, feeling discouraged, camped on the bank of a small creek and lit a fire to cook their supper. The fire began to throw out dark, ill-smelling smoke, so that it was impossible to go near it or cook on it, and the poor, tired women were forced to collect more fuel and light a fresh fire. In the middle of the night Mrs. Wilson sprang up suddenly. "I know what it is!" she cried. "What on earth are you talking about?" demanded the other woman. "Asphalt," was the answer, and she was right. That find proved much more valuable than a gold mine, for a thick deposit of asphalt covered acres and made the fortune of many others besides its discoverers.

Claim Napoleon Sought

Inspiration in Bathing

Napoleon Bonaparte was fond of taking baths, warm baths from which steam arose to envelop his head. There in the privacy of his bath plans for campaigns came to him, his mind was cleared of other things and when ever he had a mental problem to solve he would seek his thought-inspiring bath.

The tubs the French conqueror used in his campaigns were crude affairs compared to those of today. They were quite appropriate for Bonaparte, small and round. He had more than one of these tubs and he used them before Jena, Wagram, Austerlitz, Leipzig. Before Waterloo he had several of these baths, hot baths that would have scalded an ordinary person. It is known that he stopped three times on the way to the battle from Paris to battle. His baths were highly scented of can de Cologne, and before he would enter the tub he would sprinkle the liquid liberally over his body.

A Luxury

For several hours the lonely passenger had been waiting at a branch line station for the day's one train. When at last it steamed in, he saw that it consisted of an engine and two coaches, both very dilapidated. "Choo-

The Verdict

One of the theaters advertised for new songs, and invited applicants to present their works and sing them over in the presence of the manager and musical director.

Mr. Bibbs, who fancied himself as a genius, composed a ditty and presented himself at the theater.

The song was commonplace, without rhythm or tune, and the musical director put his hands to his ears as the songster shrieked it.

"What do I get for that?" said the minstrel, with an ingratiating smile, as he faltered.

"I'm a musical director—not a magistrate," was the reply.—Toronto Globe.

No Man Stands Alone

In this world a person can do nothing alone, except die; apart from that act everything that is done in the world requires the spirit of co-operation. Men say sometimes that they are self-made; but no man ever was self-made, and none ever will be, down to the last minute of time. Find a man who can truthfully say, "I never had a friend," and you will have found one who has encumbered the earth as long as he has been upon it.—James J. Davis in Moose Magazine.

Reducing?
Biddy, age seven, was much interested in her baby sister's growth. Her mother told her that she had weighed the baby that day and she weighed eleven pounds.

Biddy understood her to say seven pounds, at which she exclaimed in dismay: "Oh, the baby is ungrowing, isn't she?"

The Television

By James Lewis Hays

Now Jennie had a pretty voice
With that "come hither" tone
Her cleverest act
As a matter of fact
Was to coo in the telephone.
She had a phone in the bathroom
So she could soak and call
And then a blamed invention
Came along and spoiled it all!

The boy friends got to phoning
Till she couldn't take her bath
They rang and rang
Till she said "Oh, dang!"
(Or similar words of wrath)
She asked her pal about it
And Sue said "Oh, my DEAR!
I should think you WOULD feel QUEEN!"

It's simply this TELEVISION thing.
Now DOESN'T that make it CLEAR!

SOLVING THE GRADE CROSSING PROBLEM

In spite of the fact that we have been spending more than $60,000,000 a year to eliminate railroad grade crossings, they are increasing in number due to new road construction, according to reports presented to the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

It is stated that the cost of grade separation is too great for the problem to be solved by this method and it is suggested that uniform warning signs, protective signal devices and education of users of the highway provide most practicable remedies.

At every grade crossing is some sort of sign or warning on the railroad right-of-way. It should be a simple matter for states and the railroads to agree on an outstanding type of sign or signal device which would be noticed by even the most negligent of drivers, and place it far enough from the crossing to give adequate time for cautious approach.

The desire to beat the railroad train to the crossing is responsible for the loss of thousands of lives. Plain ordinary carelessness and incompetence are responsible for thousands more. The most telling commentary of all is found in the fact that a large part of grade crossing accidents result, not when trains strike motor cars, but when motor cars strike trains!

Recently, in a southern state, the engineer of a locomotive saw a car stalled on the track ahead of him with its occupants frantically trying to start it. He jammed on the brakes and the locomotive jumped the track. The engineer was killed. Careless motorists may have a right to risk their own lives, but when they endanger the lives of others it is time to call a halt.—The Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau, Portland, Ore.

Some Love Passports

By JANE OSBORN
(Copyright.)

AT THE house party at the Cedars the girls had sought to while away a few dull hours before the arrival of the men on Saturday afternoon by writing what they called "passports to their hearts." When Kate read from the passport she had written "height, very tall; nationality, Scotch descent; eyes, gray," she as good as admitted her preference to Donald McGuire, though she insisted that the tallying of Donald to what she had written was just a coincidence—a very remarkable coincidence, as she really had never given Donald a serious thought in her life.

Maud Grayson had a perfectly clear idea of the traits and features of the one who should hold the passport to her heart, though they certainly did not tally with any of the men who were coming to the house party. They did not tally, in fact, with anyone that Maud had ever known. The girls listened eagerly as she read, hoping that it might disclose some preference for Tom or Bill or Larry—or even for Donald. These were her specifications: "Height, six feet; build, slender but strong; hair, heavy and dark; eyes, light brown; nose, straight; mouth, straight and defiant; profession, lawyer or architect, certainly not a business man; hobbies—books, tennis, fast cars, or yachts."

The next week Maud went to visit friends in the mountains and it was not until another week had passed that she saw the girls of her set again. This was at Kate's party, the special excuse of the party being that Kate was going to announce her engagement to Donald McGuire. Kate never knew it but one of the girls had whispered to Donald that Kate admired men of Scotch descent and that she liked gray eyes.

Before the men arrived from the city the girls again got out their passports. They had agreed to bring them. Maud brought hers forth from her bag with some confusion.

"I think I've changed my mind a little," she said, and scratched off "six feet," inserting "five feet eight." Then in place of "build, slender but strong," she wrote, "build, very strong, a little heavy." But for hair "heavy and dark" she substituted "light brown and not too heavy—maybe just a little bald." Eyes changed from "light brown" to "gray," the nose became short and broad and the straight defiant mouth became "big and pugnacious." What was written concerning the chosen profession she crossed off and the hobbies turned from "books, fast cars and yachts" to "fast horses and raising mushrooms."

"I think he sounds perfectly horrid," said Kate who read the changes. "It's silly the way you just make it up as you go along. I think the person you have described would be coarse and common."

"Maybe he would be a little coarse in a nice sort of way—but that's better than being too refined. Being a little coarse makes you strong and domineering and downright."

Then the men arrived and while they were sitting on the broad terrace at the side of the house drinking cooling summer beverages Kate made a quick departure toward the driveway. A rather thick-set young man was dismounting from a sleek, black horse, which he led standing beneath a tree while Kate led him forward to the group of guests.

"This is my cousin, Tom Wales," Kate announced. "Tom, here is the crowd. Find out their names for yourself—it's so tiresome to introduce you all round. I never could get Tom to come to one of our parties before."

Kate stopped short, so surprised was she to see her cousin standing there at Maud's side apparently most delighted to be with her. "Why, Cousin Tom, that's why you asked to come." Kate accused. "You'd met Maud and couldn't be happy until you had seen her again."

Meantime Maud stood looking more than a little confused, hoping against hope that the girls had not paid too close attention to her revised passport. Kate broke this short pause.

"Tom, are you interested in mushroom growing?" she asked, shaking a finger at him. Then two cousins' arms were laid on his shoulders and Kate looked intently into his face. "Yes, your mouth is big and pugnacious and, bless my heart, you're getting a little bald."

Maud blushed furiously and darted forth to put slender fingers on Kate's lips. "Please don't," she begged. "I never dreamed that Tom was your cousin—and I didn't think you ever see each other again. I just met him when I was away last week."

That evening Tom found time to talk to his cousin for a few minutes. "I think I've fallen in love with Maud," he announced. "But it is quite hopeless. Last week she let me read a description of the sort of man she'd admire. He was everything that I am not."

"She's changed her mind," Kate informed him. "She's revised the list until it fits you exactly. Of course I didn't think of you when she read it and it didn't sound a bit attractive." But Kate addressed the last words to the thin air, for her cousin Tom had left her to look for Maud.

Ancient Mayan Carvings Throw Light on History

At Quirigua, in the republic of Guatemala, there exists a number of most interesting ruins, apparently the remains of temples and other public buildings. There are many individual monoliths, erected as monuments of different sorts, sculptured with human faces and figures, and animal designs, as well as hieroglyphics, which archeologists have not as yet been able to decipher accurately. One such stone bears a date in Mayan chronology which has been computed to coincide with 535 A. D. of the Gregorian calendar. The carving of this monolith, which is the largest of the surviving remnants, is still clear and perfect despite the long procession of centuries that has passed over it. Inscriptions and representations on this and other stones tend to the belief that Indian corn was first cultivated in Guatemala. The corn-cakes of the Mayan Indians were probably the first attempts to cook corn, or maize, and these cakes are still today the staple of the Guatemalan and Mexican diet.

Eagle Undisputed King of Feathered Creatures

In all ages and among many nations the eagle has been considered the king of birds. In ancient mythology he was held sacred to Jove, who had dominion over the seasons and held in his grasp the lightning. In early historic times many nations paid it special reverence, and the Romans, following the earlier example of the Persians or Assyrians, made it their ensign. More modern countries—France, Prussia, Italy, Mexico—have chosen its figure to adorn their standards. It was natural, therefore, that America should adopt its own fine species as its emblem. Since 1782, when it was formally chosen, the eagle has been selected to appear on the official flags of Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, New York, North Dakota, Oregon and Utah. His image also figures on various flags, standards and seals of the United States, of the army and navy, and of the President and his cabinet, and on several of our coins.—Nature Magazine.

Unconscious Helpers
A minister in Scotland recently related that once, somewhat tired, he was slowly climbing a steep hill, when all at once he heard a boy practicing on his kettledrum. He was playing a march, and, almost unconsciously, the weary climber quickened his pace, and kept in time with the rat-tat-tat of the drum. He was helped by the boy, yet the boy knew nothing of it. That thought, said the speaker, greatly encouraged him; for often, like the prophet, workers get discouraged, and think they have labored in vain, whereas it may be that their example and efforts have, unknown to them, helped many a struggling brother and sister along the path of truth and right.—Exchange.

Explained in Full
"Well, Martin," said the country squire to his ex-footman, who had left years before to join the navy and had returned on leave, "how do you like your new life?"
"Fine, sir," replied the sailor.
"That's good," said the man's previous master.
"Yes, sir, it's a grand life. Once upon a time I didn't think much of the sea, though," the sailor explained, "but now I see that the water's the finest thing in the world. For instance, if there was no water in the world not one of us would learn to swim, and then look what a lot of people would be drowned."—London Tit-Bits.

Knew the Procedure
To illustrate his contention that people can get used to anything—even his lectures—John H. Gough, the old-time temperance leader who made "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" popular with our grandfathers, used to tell this story:
A man in New Hampshire had become so used to the marriage ceremony that on the occasion of his marrying his fourth wife, when the minister requested the couple to stand up, the man said:
"I've usually sat!"—Kansas City Star.

Dahlia Cultivation
Dahlia history commences in 1791, when Cavanilles, the director of the Botanic garden of Madrid, Spain, described the flowering of a set of dahlia roots received in 1789 from Vicente Cervantes of Mexico. Dahlias first reached England in 1789 through the agency of the Marchioness of Bute. This had little effect on the history of the plant, however, as all these plants perished from a lack of proper understanding of their needs. They were re-introduced successfully in 1801 through the interest of Lady Holland.

Elixir of Life
"No one need die—discovery of the true Elixir of Life"—was the colorful language used to introduce to the public of the thirties a new patent medicine, which was described further as "a marvel of modern pathological science and ultimate triumph of medical research and investigation—a remedy found in fact which, if applied properly, will effectively prevent decay of the tissues, renew the brain, blood, bone and body, and produce a miraculous prolongation of life."—Detroit News.

THE VALUE OF SOUND DESIGN

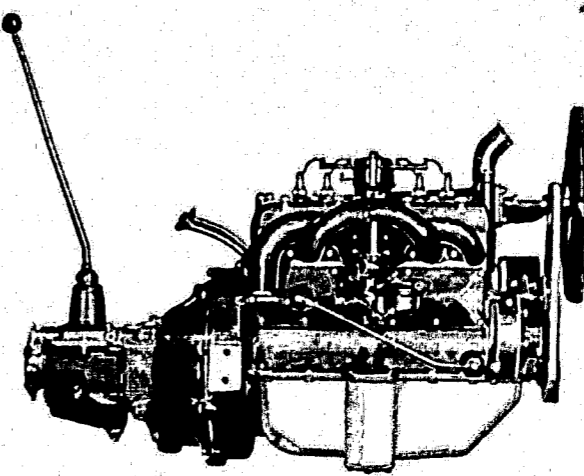

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy

THE good performance of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine.

It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance. Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot-spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, the simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

THE LAKEWOOD PLAYERS

It is an ideal play that was selected for this week by the Lakewood Players for "Just Married" has that spirit of joy that goes with the holiday week and keeps the audience in tears of laughter from beginning to end. There will be a special matinee on Friday July 4th.

"Just Married" is the creation of two expert laugh makers, Adelaide Matthews and Anna Nichols. Miss Matthews concocted those two very happy farces "Nightie Night" and "Scrambled Wives" while Miss Nichols will ever be remembered as the author and producer of "Auntie's Trick" and a large number of successful plays which made audiences happy through the land. The story concerns a queerly assorted ship's load of married folk who come together on the S. S. Lafayette at Rouleau and before the first twenty-four hours are over are all mixed up together. This mixing of people and identities leads to a series of comical situations which never fail to win laughter.

For the performance Hugh O'Connell finds himself in a place where he can do the finest sort of work as a comic and he never fails. Dorothy Stuckey makes her first appearance of the season in a role which she beautifully and also interprets the truest comedy spirit. Peg Entwistle is once more finely suited and Wallace Clarke and Gladys Webster, appearing for the first time this season, gave fine performances and received warm welcomes back to Lakewood. These old favorites Thurston Hall, Harold Wright, Robert Hudson, Kathryn Rice, William E. Barry, and Winona Stanton did service in making this performance a perfect delight.

For next week The Lakewood Players will present "Hobday" one of the greatest comedy successes ever produced by Arthur Hays Sulzberger of the famous Plymouth Theatre in New York. It received the approval of the public and press alike. With Hugh O'Connell and Peg Entwistle in the comedy it is certain that "Hobday" will be given as a performance at Lakewood on at least one of the dates in New York. This is a comedy that has been of great value and has a laughter can't get of it.

LOVELL TAKES GIFT GAME FROM BETHEL 6-4

Bunglers Outfit Lovellites But Gave Up On The Cushions

(by R. E. D.)

Although Bethel outfit Lovell 11 to 0 Sunday in a game played at Lovell, exceedingly poor baserunning spoiled any chances that the locals may have had of winning. The B. A. A. infield was functioning all right but the outfield was terrible. It may have been the bright sunlight, or perhaps the accident that interrupted the game; whatever it was—something was radically wrong. Davis missed an easy fly in left field and although Lurvey and Smiley were credited with no errors they were running circles in their respective pastures. Both missed flies that should have been easy outs.

Maynard White started on the slab for the locals and went well for two innings. He was a little shy of control, however, and his wildness resulted in a pass and a wild pitch in the first inning. These two lapses and a baserun gave Lovell a big start. The second inning went along all right but the third was something else again. The first man up, Maynard White, threw a ball in an attempt to get the next man. A pass followed. The stage was set for a killing—it came. Only the killing was almost fatal to any Bethel hopes. Page, Lovell slugger, connected for a triple that netted three runs for his team and sent White to the outfield.

"Bill" Cole, late of Bowdoin, now assumed the pitching burden for the Bunglers. The first man reached first on an error and Page scored Lovell's sixth run. Two more men got on in the inning but no further damage was done.

For the next six innings the best Lovell could do was one lone hit off the college star.

In the meantime Bethel had wasted four hits in the first two cantos. "Scout" Robertson connected for one in the first, only to die in an attempted something or other on his way to third. This was a very mild beginning for in the next frame White, Swan and Smiley all connected safely, only to be caught on base. Maynard was caught off second, through no fault of his, however, because he would have been safe if the base had not moved. Swan stole second and went to third on Smiley's hit but was anchored there while his team mate was thrown out trying to steal second.

With two out in the fifth Eldredge reached first on an error. Rose, and Cole, temporary Bethelites but not bunglers, connected safely to score two runs. White was stranded in the sixth and had made his second hit off the game. White also connected safely in that frame but there was no one to push them across home and the score remained one run for us in the seventh. Further nothing was heard when Godard went to sleep after stealing second, Smiley took his third hit in the eighth but the hit-and-run was the usual way and he was thrown out going to the keyhole mark.

Bethel had a chance to win the game in the last two cantos. Smiley and Eldredge both reached base but Smiley was caught when Rose's fly was dropped. There were still two men on and one a fly came through and Van secured Godard had a chance to win with the tying runs on second and third but neither he nor Lurvey could crash through with a hit.

The Bethel team had a fight talk before the game and laid plans to win. And with what result? Every time the hit-and-run play was used there was no hit. As a result our eleven hits scored four runs. It would seem to the proverbial casual observer that the locals got most of the good baseball out of their season in that "Welchday's" game but us hope for another several of form for the games coming this week.

Oxford County United Parish

Comprising Albany, Stoneham, North Lovell and the Waterfords. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. I. Bull; A. C. Townsend; Ralph A. Brandon. Miss Mary A. Beals, summer ass't.

Rev. and Mrs. Brandon are now settled in the North Waterford parsonage.

The entire staff and their families attended parts of the Conference of Rural Church Workers of New England held last week at Ocean Park.

Last Sunday a very successful Children's Day program was carried out at Waterford Flat. Miss Beals assisted the local committee, and has now begun plans for a similar program in the North Waterford Sunday school.

The Waterford School will be closed during July and August.

The July meeting of the Council is to be held at Albany on Thursday of this week. There will be an afternoon and evening session, with a supper.

The speaker in the evening will be Prof. Ralph Adams of Bangor Theological Seminary. Prof. Adams is at the head of the recently established Department of Rural Church Work, and much inspiration and help on the problems of the Parish is anticipated.

Plans are being perfected by Rev. Mr. Brandon and Miss Beals for the two sessions of Daily Church Vacation School. The first will begin at Waterford Flat July 8, and will continue for three weeks. Then the second session will be held for three weeks at East Stoneham. It is hoped to make these two schools accessible to all the children of the Parish. Contributions of car service, or money to hire same, for the transportation of the children from the outlying districts is much needed and will be greatly appreciated.

Th. Radcliff Chautauqua will be in Waterford again this summer, and the dates as announced are August 1st, 2nd and 4th. This means that the tent will be on the ground over Sunday, and the staff is hoping to arrange for an "All-the-Parish" service with some prominent speaker for that day.

The present summer schedule of Church services makes it possible for each Church to have a morning service. Thus, Waterford, Stoneham and North Lovell have services at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) while North Waterford and Albany worship at 11 a. m. This leaves the afternoons free, and the Staff hopes to hold several "All-the-Parish" services at different points, as speakers can be secured. One has already been held, on Sunday, June 22nd, when Rev. Mr. Brandon spoke for the first time as a member of the Staff.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Southern Cross Makes Westward Flight Across the Atlantic Ocean.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONCE again the Atlantic has been conquered by aviators, and this time it was the westward passage, made successfully but once before, that was negotiated. Maj. Charles Kingsford-Smith of Australia and three companions flew the famous plane Southern Cross from Port Marnock, Ireland, near Dublin, and made a safe landing at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. Their intended destination was New York, but when they neared the Newfoundland coast they ran into dense fog and for six hours flew blind, losing their course and wandering aimlessly. Meanwhile their fuel was running low and their predicament seemed serious. However, their radio was efficient and the operator, John W. Stannage, kept in constant communication with shore stations. A relief plane was about to take off from Harbor Grace when the Southern Cross came in out of the fog and dropped gracefully to earth.

While Kingsford-Smith, Stannage and his companions, Earl Van Dyke and Capt. J. Patrick Sault, rested after the two thousand mile flight the plane was refueled, and next morning at daylight the trip to New York was resumed. Major Kingsford-Smith said they would fly later to San Francisco, completing a round the world flight for him and the plane.

New York city gave the gallant aviators its customary reception, with pageants, parade, luncheons and dinners. The pilot brought across a letter from President Hoover, which he planned to deliver in person at the White House.

The directors and executives of the National Air races sent Major Kingsford-Smith a telegram of warm congratulation and invited him to remain over in Chicago or to return from the Pacific coast to be their guest during the races which begin August 25.

COL. ROBERTO PIERRO, now Mexican air hero, made a non-stop flight from New York to Mexico City in 15 hours and 37 minutes, a new record and ten hours less than the time taken by Colonel Lindbergh for the trip from Washington to Mexico City last December.

YET another most suspicious event in aviation circles, as in Iraq, was the death of a pilot in England and Mrs. Lindbergh at Englewood, N. J. The glad news was given all the world immediately by newspaper headlines and radio broadcasts, and congratulatory messages poured in on the happy parents. The aviator was characteristically reticent, but Ambassador Morrow proclaimed himself the happiest grandfather in the world. In filling out the fifth certificate Mrs. Lindbergh designated herself as a professional flyer and gave her home as St. Louis, Mo.

Rear Admiral Byrd and Colonel Lindbergh met in a New York hotel and exchanged congratulations. Byrd mentioned the birth of Lindbergh's son and the colonel's high altitude coast to coast flight. Lindbergh spoke glowingly of the aerial trip to the South Pole. He left his congratulations for Byrd's flight, the pilot of Byrd's plane on its polar dash.

PRESIDENT HOOVER last week was compelled by his honest convictions to veto another pension bill, and this time the veto was upheld by the house of representatives. The measure was the World War veterans bill originating in the house and passed by the senate despite Mr. Hoover's warning that it would not pass. Only six senators voted against the bill, which the President said was "bad legislation" against the best interests of the veterans themselves and placing "an unjustified load upon the taxpayers at a time every effort should be made to lighten it."

As soon as the senate had acted, the Republicans of the house held a caucus and enough votes were pledged to sustain the veto. To facilitate action the house accepted the senate amendments and the measure was sent to Mr. Hoover. Then, immediately after his veto message was received, the vote sustaining it was taken. A substitute bill was then rushed through the house, with the prospect of definite action on it by the senate within a few days. The new measure embodies the pension system. Its initial annual cost to the government will be $50,000,000, which will increase to $80,000,000 in three years. It will apply to probably 200,000 veterans (in addition to 245,000 now receiving compensation) whose pensions will range from $12 to $40 a month, depending upon the degree of disability. The vetoed bill, according to Director Hines of the veterans' bureau, would have cost $102,000,000 the first year and ultimately would have added $225,000,000 annually to the present expenditures for veterans.

BY A vote of 15 to 4 the senate foreign relations committee reported the London naval treaty to the senate for approval. Neither Chairman Borah nor the warmest advocates of the pact on the committee submitted any written report explaining and commending it. The four who refused to recommend its ratification were Johnson of California, Moses of New Hampshire, Robinson of Indiana and Shipstead of Minnesota.

President Hoover remained steadfast in his intention of calling an immediate special session of the senate to act on the treaty, although twenty-four senators signed a round robin petition asking him to abandon this pact and allow consideration of the pact to be postponed until after the November elections. The protesting senators declared they were worn out with their public duties, the senate having been in almost continuous session since December, 1928, and that many of them had been compelled to neglect their private affairs.

Administration leaders are confident the treaty will be ratified eventually, but admit the controversy will be long and bitter. The opposition has prepared proposed reservations which would include the following declarations:

That the treaty involves no permanent surrender of the previously claimed right of the United States to build as it pleases.

That under the so-called "escape clause" America can build whatever type of ship it desires in the event of England or Japan building beyond the treaty limits because of the construction programs of nations not signatory to the pact.

That under the replacement clauses Great Britain can replace her ships on condition that she ships of that category.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S vacation tour, plans for which already include visits to some of the national parks in the West, may also take him down to Mexico in August. Both the Mexican government and Ambassador Morrow have invited him, and after a conference in the White House Mr. Morrow said:

"I strongly urged President Hoover to visit Mexico while I am there and I believe that he will do so. His plans to make a trip during August which will bring him to the Mexican border, and I believe that it would go a long way to cement our good relations if he would visit that country. I know that he wishes to do so and has only postponed his visit because of the press of business."

SUIT for title damages of $30,000, was filed in Kansas City by the Grigsby-Grunew company of Chicago against the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company and others, and the plaintiff complains that the existence of a vast pool of radio patents created in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and says the defendants thus illegally compelled the payment of royalties of almost $8,000,000 by the Grigsby-Grunew company.

The petition contains many of the allegations made in a petition filed by the United States government in the federal court of Delaware on May 19, 1928. That petition, they said, asked for dissolution of the illegal combination which this petition also alleges.

ROTARY International celebrated its silver jubilee last week in Chicago, the city of its birth. Members to the number of some 18,000 assembled from all parts of the world, with their families, and the doings included not only banquets and other festive events but also sessions in which the problems of the trades and professions were seriously discussed and many social questions were debated.

CHIESTER H. GRAY, Washington representative of the Farm Bureau federation, has given out an analysis purporting to show that agriculture benefits much more from the new tariff law than does industry.

Duties on raw agricultural products have been increased on an average by 51.0 per cent over the rates of the 1922 law, tabulations made by Mr. Gray indicate. The industrial rate increases have averaged 14.6 per cent, the agricultural increases being more than three times as much as industrial increases.

HOSBIE and senate conferees agreed on the rivers and harbors bill exactly as it was passed by the senate, and it was sent to the President for his approval. It is estimated that the bill authorizes the expenditure of more than $135,000,000 on projects which if completed will cost in excess of $800,000,000. Actual expenditures must be made from the lump sum annual appropriation of $55,000,000 at the disposal of the army engineers.

AMOS W. W. WOODCOCK was selected to be director of the bureau of prohibition in the Department of Justice to begin his work on July 1, the date of transfer of prohibition enforcement from the Treasury department. Mr. Woodcock has been United States district attorney at Baltimore, a forty-six years old and served with the chief of G. A. Youngquist, assistant attorney general in charge of dry law and income tax prosecutions, in the latter's initial drive to better law enforcement.

PUBLICATION of the second section of the report of the Simon commission on India served only to accentuate the rage of the Indian Nationalists. The commission recommended primarily that there be a federal organization of all the Indian states; that the new constitution should, so far as possible, contain within itself provision for its own development, allowing for natural growth and diversity; and that during the period in which India is progressing on the road to complete self-government, there must be full provision made for the efficiency of the fundamentals of government, which means that for many years the presence of British troops, and British officers serving in Indian regiments, will be essential.

Hindus, Moslems and Parsees are united in condemning the Simon report and the Nationalists have renewed their demand that the London round table conference in October be boycotted unless the British government promises to discuss ways and means for dominion status for India.

Prisoners in the central jail of Rangoon, Burma, mutilated, armed themselves in the prison armory and fought a desperate battle with the guards and military police. Before they were subdued 45 men were killed, most of them coolies, and 71 wounded.

REPORTS of the serious illness of Pope Pius XI alarmed Rome and the whole catholic world. It was said he was suffering from an acute bladder trouble and that uraemic poisoning was threatened. The Vatican, however, gave out information tending to show the reports were exaggerated and indicated that his plans for certain important ceremonies had not been altered.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Floyd Unwin, unsuccessful in life's struggle, with his old friend Bettington, painter of the note, but not wealthy, take dinner with the young couple, who are in financial straits. Unwin induces a written pledge which the young couple take in the office of the painter, who is a man of vast wealth, but a deceiver. Calling at Gibbons' office, as arranged, Mary is asked by the financier to sign her employer's business secrets. Mary, exhausted by despair, announces his intention of taking her to the ocean, but is to be accompanied by a secretary and a wife. Bettington, who is a man of vast wealth, but a deceiver, is asked by the financier to sign her employer's business secrets. Mary, exhausted by despair, announces his intention of taking her to the ocean, but is to be accompanied by a secretary and a wife.

CHAPTER II.—Bettington, painting the Maine coast, is caught in a trap and seeks refuge in a shack owned by Jonathan Gibbs. Next morning Bettington's clothes being ruined by the storm, he dons an old outfit of his and sets out to row to the nearest town. On the way he is decoyed by a motor boat and knocked senseless. Afterward being conveyed to a hotel and kept prisoner, Gibbs discards Bettington's boat empty and really assumes he is drowned. In the painter's clothes he finds money in New York address, Bettington's. Gibbs goes there. He is a man from justice, and one night, armed without cause, he endeavors to escape by the fire escape, but falls to death.

CHAPTER III.—Bettington, prisoner of the ship, sees Unwin and others on board. Later Unwin goes to Bettington is questioned by the man known as the "Boss" and, seeing who he is, is shown an account of his death in New York. Gibbs, having been identified as his. The man insists Bettington is Andrew, once famous surgeon, but now a murderer, who had been known as Jonathan Gibbs. Bettington also told that Unwin's son and daughter are on board the ship, which is chartered by Radway. The "Boss" though nominally the master of the boat, and has to hold Radway until the fiancée pays $1,000,000 for his release.

CHAPTER IV.—Bettington is introduced to the Radways, Mary and her father, the young man, a wireless operator, and Captain Hallett, who he distrusts him, as "Doctor Wattle" crew. Clements tells Bettington, all outlaws over whom he has quite power, through his knowledge of their crimes. He also tells the painter he needs "Orme's" skill as surgeon.

CHAPTER V.—Radway keeps up heavy drinking, and is desperately have observed you for some time, Mrs. Radway," he began, "and think you will keep calmer than women when I tell you what you have."

He noticed that he had dropped the "madman." He was no longer obliging and civil steward. Alas, he was courteous, his manner that of an equal.

"I have to say," he continued, "I am concerned for the safety of you other people, Miss Unwin. I am going to ask you to promise me you will not consent Captain Hallett or anyone on what I tell you. They are too much prejudiced to be of any use."

"And if I decline?" he reflected a moment.

"I am going to rely on your intelligence when you have heard my news as I advise. Mrs. Radway, you know that I am not a steward at all. I assumed this grotesque and added jacket for special reasons. The death of your husband upset my mind."

"Then what are you?" she demanded. "I was glad she did not show it, although he was sure she experienced it. He knew there was no nature so difficult to deal with as hysterical woman."

A collector of coins. You might say my hobby by a harder name. At considerable cost I induced Mr. Radway to buy this boat. Gathering the crew together was another item. It was my intention to hold your husband to ransom for a million dollars."

He outlined his plan and the reasons for which he believed success had been certain. But he made no mention of the forger's name. "You horrify me," she cried, "and am glad your plans have come to light."

"But have they?" he returned. "That's just the point. I admit I had they had at first. You are his wife, Mrs. Radway, and I shall tax you the same sum. If you agree to let me the money and swear not to take any legal steps against me, I will engage that the trip back to New York will be swift and free from unpleasantness. Hallett will never need know anything."

"I shall not pay you. I will not lend myself to such an infamous thing."

"Then you will put yourself to a test deal of trouble," he said in an even tone. "Much more trouble than you can imagine. Let me take the thing in detail. You inform Hallett. Very well. He will try to intimidate the crew. He will find himself, if I can save him in time, in irons. Leary, one of my men, assumes command and we turn again south. We shall coal at the Bahamas."

"You will have to give in some time or another. The authorities will look for us."

"Oh, no, Miss Unwin will have written to her parents, stating that you are remaining away for an indefinite period. The same hand which was to have forged your husband's letters will forge hers. Letters from you will be received by your attorneys in New York to the same effect. I have left nothing to chance."

"But after a time you will have to give in. You cannot keep us away for ever."

"After a time, my dear lady—that is, if you wear out my patience—you will not want to return to your native land; nor will the girl Mary. Come now, you are a woman of the world. Consider the situation; consider the type of men there are aboard."

I observed that during the service just over, you could not help looking at the chief engineer. He is the man with the crooked nose and the eyes like polished steel. There is a man who is hard to handle. And you may have seen the man called Sam. He is the broad ape-like creature with the rolling walk and enormous face. In his less angry moods he likes the solace of youth."

Evelyn Radway put her hands over her burning face.

"Stop! stop!" she cried. Most vividly the horrors presented themselves to her which he had but hinted at. They were ravening wolves. She wondered how many more of them were hidden in the secret places of this horrible vessel to come out like jungle animals in the darkness. Little Mary Unwin, who had been allowed to come on the trip because she had promised to take care of her!

"I am glad you see what lies in store if you are foolish enough to force my hand. You are helpless. It is fortunate a man of my temperament is in command."

He wondered what sudden thought changed her face. She was looking at him with almost a pleading way.

"Is Doctor Wattle one of your men?"

"No. What makes you think that?"

He could see that her relief was enormous.

"Captain Hallett told me you and he were so much together." She felt ashamed that she had doubted him. She ought to have known that he was one of the dependable loyal men of the stuff true friends are made of. There was one man aboard on whom she could rely for guidance. Clements made the surgeon's position even more reasonable.

"My health is indifferent and I have needed his care. I suppose you wish to talk this over with him. Warn him that a word to Hallett, his nephew or the Unwins, and there will be bloodshed instantly. If once fighting begins even I can't say when it will cease."

He did not try to emphasize matters. He could see that she had made up her mind. She would not let Hallett know. The matter of the payment would be taken up when she was in a more composed frame of mind. The coming interview with Andrew Orme would be of great service to him. A million dollars! With his lion's share of it, what might not his next carefully planned coup realize?

Most criminals have longed to be able to start anew with the knowledge the years have brought them and freed from those marks of identification which the police record so well. Perhaps in all the history of crime there had been no such case as that of the man who called himself by the name of Clements. Not again would he run the risks that he had once taken. With money, he could always hire men for the rougher work.

He roused himself from these pleasing reflections when Mrs. Radway rose to her feet. She was a beautiful woman. There was little to marvel at in the doctor's surrender to her charms. He rather liked the man he thought of as Andrew Orme, and he hoped Andrew Orme liked him. The minor operation of which he had spoken was in reality one of extreme delicacy; no bungler must attempt it. He intended to keep Orme with him permanently. Facial surgery was not old enough for anyone to state with certainty how well it would last.

"I think I should like to see Doctor Wattle," Mrs. Radway said.

"I will send him in, but caution you not to let him try any violence with me or endeavor to make Hallett an ally. If he discovers your warning he may be deceiving you to a worse danger than he knows."

Bettington was in his room. "Mrs. Radway wants you. Everything has turned out as I wished. She will warn you not to be violent to me; she thinks you are her only friend. It will not be difficult; already she believes in you. You have no prejudices to overcome."

"She'll pay?" Bettington thought it would seem odd if he made no comment on a decision which meant a great deal of money to him. He started on his career of deception by smiling at the man he would gladly have strangled.

"It was Mary Unwin who really decided her. I played those two trump cards, Sam and Metzger. Metzger was watching her like a hawk all through the burial service, and she noticed him. Metzger has been less fortunate than I; he cannot conceal his emotions. I shall seem to avoid you, but will come to your room when dinner is over."

Never had Bettington experienced the sense of shame so keenly as when he left Clements and entered the library. Evelyn Radway was walking up and down. She crossed quickly to him as he entered and looked into his eyes without speaking. Then with a little sudden, spontaneous gesture she put out her hands to him.

"I believe you are really my friend," she said.

"No one lives who is more anxious to help you," he answered. Was not this the moment, he wondered, to risk all and tell her of his knowledge of the plot? Then, suddenly, he smiled to mind how Clements had used a dictograph to trap those whom he suspected. Clements might be listening now.

He listened to her description of the interview with the steward. He tried to affect wrath and indignation, but achieved only inarticulate sounds. Clements had been right in assuring him that deception would be easy for the reason Evelyn Radway believed in him.

"It's robbery," he declared. "It's unheard of. Captain Hallett—"

"He must not be told of it," she retorted. "I want you to promise me Hallett's buffers, in so do. If we can pull together there will be four men against almost a dozen."

As Bettington went to his own quarters he saw that Hallett was having his baggage moved into the large rooms formerly occupied by Clements. The steward was not to be seen. The captain looked at the ship's doctor with a sneer.

"I guess you'll miss your friend." What personal grudge, Bettington wondered, did this bellicose mariner bear against him? He had always liked sailors and been liked by them. Hallett was a new type to him, he supposed. Then he remembered his instructions to enlist the captain's sympathies.

"I may have a more congenial neighbor in you," he said pleasantly. "Congenial? Me? H—l, no!" Hallett flared. "I'm commander here and I'll have those under me keep their places."

"Admiral!" Bettington returned. "I see no objection to that; but I am not under you, Captain. My duties do not conflict with yours, nor am I here to aid in working the ship."

Hallett granted in reply. There was no answer to this.

CHAPTER VIII

Tragedy on the High Seas

Never had a day, which was to end in tragedy, dawned more brightly. Evelyn Radway was early on deck and found Bettington already there. She discovered herself to be free from much of the awkwardness of the day before and greeted the doctor as a friend to whom one need make no explanations or expect any.

Bettington was irritated by finding Silvers at his side. Any interruption at such a time was annoying. "Well?" he said. "What is it?"

"Mr. Clements says, will you kindly look at his throat."

"I suppose I had better go," he said when the lad was gone.

The name of the steward had brought a troubled look to Mrs. Radway's face. For a moment she had forgotten his existence.

"Certainly," she cried, "and do not let him think I want to evade the monetary payment."

Clements was in the room formerly occupied by the captain.

"My throat's all right," he said, "that was an excuse. I left you all alone last night, because I hoped you might learn something that wouldn't have been said had I been there."

Bettington wondered whether he had not some dictaphone contrivance which would already have put him in possession of what had passed.

"The most important thing is that Mrs. Radway wants you to know she isn't going to evade paying the ransom."

"That's good," Clements cried. "We must arrange some way in which it can be paid through you. It will be safe to let them use the wireless. Tell Sam that Grammann is to put the instrument in order. I'd better not be seen near the wireless lounge."

Sam looked doubtful when he heard Clements' instructions.

"Grammann's got at some of the crew's rum," he explained, "and he's in an excitement to get away with me, but I'll be about it."

Grammann, who had a subtle brain, did not show. He waited up, but in the fore-cabin to prove his solidarity. It would not take a minute, he declared, to make the necessary adjustments.

He had the misfortune to meet the captain face to face as he crossed the deck. His unsteady step and the odor of rum arrested the shipper's attention.

"You've been drinking, you saine, and Hallett, gripping his arm, said, 'I'm not too drunk to fix the wireless your fool nephew can't.'"

Bettington saw that there might be a disagreeable scene.

"Go below," he whispered to Mrs. Radway. "This may frighten Mary."

Grammann laughed aloud. He was stricken with amusement to think he had for days duped this detestable commander. It was the best joke he had ever heard. He wanted everybody to know. It seemed a pity that his victim should remain in ignorance. He felt gifted above other men with a sense of power. He was too full of rebellion and rum to be cautious.

"Then you could have fixed it long ago if you'd wanted to?"

"Any time at all," Grammann boasted, "but I wasn't taking my orders from you. I was obeying the man higher up."

"So there's a man higher up, is there?" said Hallett. "Do the rest of you take orders from him?"

"All of 'em," said Grammann with a comprehensive gesture.

"Then you're a clever fellow," said Hallett with ominous quiet. "You're cleverer than I gave you credit for being, eh?"

"You bet I am," Grammann retorted enthusiastically. Then he laughed aloud. "And you think you're boss here. It's a h—l of a boss you are. You! Huh!"
